Farewell

phrases

Tweets from our Seniors

Although I wanted this year to end quickly when it began, I don't want it to end because of all the new friends I have made.

#WillMissAllOfYou
Ryan Patterson

This year has been my best in high school. Thank you so much. I'm going to miss this.

#Seniors2013 I love you guys!

Constance Vendt

Senior year was by far the best! It's a time where the pressure was off and the awesomeness was on! #Winning
#BeastMode Jesse Kirkland

In case anyone was still wondering @LindsayWard and @NickiWard are not related. #popularname Nicki & Lindsay Ward

Thanks to the @LMRD for all the memories and for making these the best 4 years of my life. You all mean the world to me!

#loveyouall #pride
Abby Layer

It's incredible how fast 4 years go by! I couldn't have asked for a better experience!

#timeflies
#goodtimes
Rebecca Greaney

Oh look, we did make it! Take that, haters. #Seniors2013 #JustMisunderstood
Morgan Farrell

Had a great 4 years here! #TimeFlies
Enjoy the

#LittleThings. Katie
#GrowingUp Bobos

Let's get down to business, to defeat the Huns. #Mulan

Marjan Sitnikoski

Four years flew by like a flash. Embrace the years to come and always remember where you came from.

Four years has felt like a long time, but as I sit and remember these years it feels like it hasn't been long enough. Lerin Manis

Keep it Trill Lowell High.

Dakota Layman

Thanks for the best 4 years of my life. I love you all! #13

Many memories made here at

#LHS #RDP

Andi Burns

Enjoy the time you have but don't waste away that time.

Senior year wouldn't have been the same without @brenorris16 & @gbolttt_33

#BestFriends #LoveThem

Natalie Zeiter

I've known most of these guys for almost my entire life. It's crazy to think some of us are going away.

Trenton Espravnik

I am truly going to miss everyone in the band
program, thanks for the memories!

*Sam

Really enjoyed attending and participating in #LHSathletics. Felt
like we were all on the same team.

Contrary to popular belief, creating a yearbook is more than just making a scrapbook; taking pictures, writing copy, and designing spreads is time consuming and a bit of a daunting task. Twenty-two students stepped up to complete this difficult job. Along with all of these students, we could not have made this yearbook possible without Mrs. O'Neill. All of our hard work paid off in this yearbook and we could not be more proud with the outcome. We have worked the difficulties and struggles and celebrated our great accomplishments. Our success this year has been outstanding and we would like to thank everyone that contributed to the yearbook program this year. We hope you enjoy the verbal and visual theme and recognize that life, like our yearbook, is a collection of memories that are often viewed through our own individual lenses.

Sincerely, Your Editors,
Kaitlyn Henson (12), Nicki Ward (12), Hannah Million (12), Sam Swank (12), Kara Manojlovich (12), Alex Suckow (11), and Nina Vasquez (10)

Alyssa Pokropinski (11) and Kylee Pelton (11) go tubing on Lake of the Hills to cool off on a hot July day. Hanging on for dear life, these ladies enjoyed soaking up the sun on an extremely hot day.

While most people only dream of swimming with the dolphins, Maria Rangel (9) fulfilled that wish while vacationing in Florida with her family. Maria said, "it was really fun. I'm glad I got to do it!"

At the Red Rock Canyon in Las Vegas, Breanna Propes (12) and Allie Itczak (12) take a scenic picture in front of one side of the mountains. Being in the desert in the summer is "extremely hot" according to Propes.

Preparing for their senior year, Natalie Zeiter (12) and Kalyne Godbolt (12) enjoy the warm weather by attending a bonfire with many of their classmates. Based on their smiles, we'd say they had a great time!

Every year when that bell rings at three o'clock on the last day of school there is an uproar of students all looking forward to the same thing: summer vacation. Brett Curry (9) was anticipating his first year on the high school football team, while Austen Backe (12) was looking forward to being able to play in more shows with his band. While most students generally stop thinking about school as soon as that bell rings, this summer left them to ponder what was to come in the following year. The students were informed that as an entire school, we would be transitioning to "one-on-one" where every student would be receiving his or her own laptop. In order to receive their laptops, each student was required to come in during the summer for an informational meeting where they would be taught the basics of the laptop. When asked if felt that more was expected from the students because they were trained prior to the first day of school, Cesar Vasquez (10) said, "Yes, because you have to act more mature in order to keep your laptops." Domenica Wilding (9) said, "the pickup was hectic. It was my first impression of the school because I came from another state. It was crazy!" Hannah Jelinek (9) added, "the lines were a mile long." Although the distribution was intense, walking into school on the first day with a brand-new MacBook Air was an experience most students will never forget.

Jessi Merkel (11) takes a walk through the Italian foothills during her foreign exchange trip. Sometime you have to step away from "reality" for a while to appreciate everything you have!

Having traveled to Nicaragua on a mission trip with their church, these thoughtful and giving sisters, Cambria Wynsma (12) and Tori Wynsma (10), pose in their fashionable hardhats. Most of this trip was all work and no play, but these girls went there with a mission and came home knowing the mission was accomplished.

This group of LHS students enjoyed a relaxing canoe ride in the hot August sun. One last summer trip before it was back to the books...or the Macbooks we should say!

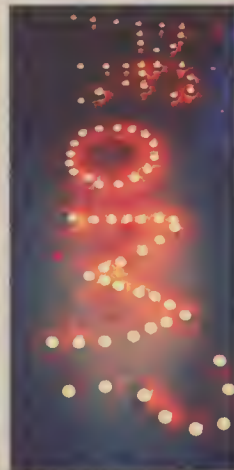

While vacationing in Ely, Minnesota, Zach McDonald (12) and Morgan Ball (11) are getting ready to take the canoe out on the lake for the day. One of them worked really hard while the other relaxed in the sun. We'll let you decide who took the lead!

loved again? Would you never return to Varsity football player Marjan Sitnikoski during his junior year and it lead to him never being able to play again. When he found out the devastating news he said, "I cried my eyes out and was depressed for a long time." Marjan came back to the team on a quest to be the best leader he could be. He wanted to thank his family, Hannah Felder (12), and his "brothers" on the team for all their support. Marjan also said, "When I got hurt I told Kameron King (11) that he had to step it up, and that he had more potential and love for the game than he realized." He also wanted to tell his "brothers" "don't take anything for granted, because you don't know when you will lose it. Never stop fighting no matter what obstacle comes between you and your goals for football and life." Even if Marjan never plays again, he will always be remembered as being the the strongest player on the team and a brother for life.

What makes a team? Many say that it takes a large number of people that all strive for a single goal. Others might say that it's a group of dedicated players that always try their hardest. For this girls' golf team, size didn't mean a thing. The four unique and very talented girls that formed the girls golf team all had the dedication and work ethic to become true competitors. "My greatest accomplishment this season was shooting my best overall round at Sectionals" Lerin Manis (12) said. The girls went on to compete in the BMW Championship and Sectionals. Jorden Zubay competed as an individual at Regionals, which she says was her greatest moment from the entire season. "Shooting my best rounds at Regionals and Sectionals was the highlight from this season. I was so determined and excited". This tiny team continued to prove how well they worked together, and their bond grew stronger than ever. "It's the greatest team, ever. I can't even pick out the funniest moment, because it seemed like it happened on every bus ride to the golf meets!" shared Zubay (12). Regardless of their size, this team continued to prove their might and awe-inspiring determination.

TENNIS

Famous tennis player Arthur Ashe once said, "One important key to success is self-confidence. An important key to self-confidence is preparation." After interviewing Coach Hudak, it appears as though he feels the same way. When speaking of his personal goals and motivation as a coach, Dustin Hudak said, "I think it's important to realize that all players are individuals. Taking individual players and turning those individuals into one collective team is my mission as a coach." When discussing this with the players, it was easy to realize that he was successful in this endeavor. Each and every member of the team echoed this sentiment by sharing their appreciation for their coach and for the camaraderie created over the course of the season. Hudak said his favorite part of this season was "coaching new players" and the most difficult match was against Andrean. When defining success, most would agree that reaching your set goal is a measure of achievement. In the case of coach Hudak, success was achieved by "ending the season just where I'd hoped we would be."

"NO EXCUSES!! Play like a champ!"
Team Motto

As the team gets together for a quick pep talk before their matches begin the group couldn't have been more anxious about this match. Focusing and supporting each other for the betterment of the team was a collective goal. "Even though tennis can be an individual sport, it's important to function as a unit" Delmer Flemming (11) said.

Did you play tennis before coming to high school or was it something new you just wanted to try?

I've played since second grade.

Is tennis a more physical or mental sport? What's some advice for underclassmen or incoming freshmen?

I think tennis is more mental. "Join tennis, it's fun. We run stairs." Coach Hudak

When asked what phrase would best suit these tough players, they all cried out, "never give up." Although their record wasn't what they'd hoped it would have turned out to be, this team screamed spirit with every kick of the game. Coach Werling said "This team has taught me the value of heart. No matter how tough things would get this season, they would always play with heart on the field." Noah Newcomb (11) echoed his sentiments with, "No matter what went on during the season, we never gave up and we never let our team members down." Zach Potat left words of wisdom saying "work ten-times harder than you have before." These positive attitudes are what left this group of boys with such school spirit. Some of their tougher moments on the field yielded their best results; their first win was against Hobart with a score of 2-0. The next game they won was against Hammond Morton with a score of 8-1. With such a great team, it's obvious that people will miss the ones who are moving on. Like most "end of the season" wishes, Coach expressed a sadness saying, "I will miss their humor. My seniors this year made me laugh quite a bit." Luke Ison (12) also said "I'm going to miss the family I made through all of the years I played soccer." One can only hope that each soccer season to come is filled with as much pride and spirit as this team!

"I listen to music with some of my teammates and we just relax and try to have fun," Jordan Sanders (9) said. In addition to jamming out, these players understood the importance of physically preparing for a game. "After my usual pep-talk, I did a WHOLE LOT of stretching," Kirsten Adkins (9) said. Regardless of preparation style, all the members of this team agreed that nothing was more important than the bond they created by spending so much time together. Through the wins, the losses, and the sweat and the tears, this team survived it all. The memories made during their long bus rides and intense practices are sure to remain brilliant memories of their high school lives. "The funniest memories I have from this year are from the bus rides to the games. We were all singing and laughing the entire time" remarked Danielle Sopovski (12). When the girls aren't joking around together during team bonding nights, they are dedicating their time to becoming fierce, strong players. "We tied Chesterton this year! They've always been our biggest rivals, so this is a great accomplishment for us, and I couldn't be prouder of this team" Darby Misner (12) said. Even though these devoted players did not make it to Sectionals this year, they are very hopeful for a strong comeback next season. "My advice for the underclassmen wishing to join is: try out. I was really nervous, but it was the best decision I've ever made. Soccer is my life now, and I couldn't be more pleased" Peyton Asher (12) proudly declared.

The runners all pose accordingly after their race against Highland, bright and early on a Saturday morning.

Striding with pride, Holly Opat (12) represents Lowell with her drive at the Hanover meet, September 22.

The seniors show off their gifts from underclassmen at the end of sectionals at Lemon Lake.

Seconds before the shot of the pistol, runners heighten their limbs with quick routine stretches, then bop up and down to intensify their agility. Lastly, they take a forced, deep breath. Bam. The sound of the gun interrupts all current racing thoughts; the body immediately takes over the mind.

The only thing standing in the way of success is the inner thoughts that need to be blocked in order to focus on the meet. It's time to leave reality behind and clear the mind.

"The one thing I focus on, is to just finish.

"That's all I tell myself.", said Jessica Bullitt (10) Mentally and physically the girls pour every ounce of horse power into reaching ground zero. "Before every race, I remind myself why I run. I run for the team, but my Dad really motivates me during the race. I also make sure I run for myself, because if I lose that then my focus is gone.", said Holly Opat (12). The cross country team was victorious at the Highland invite, coming in fourth place, leaving the lady red Devils feeling more confident than ever. "Throughout my cross country career, I'm most proud of the fact that I can say I did it and doing all the things I never knew I was capable of.", said Mackenzie Nichlos (12). Whether it was printed in plain black and white in the weekly newspaper, or circulated here at school, these girls unconsciously publicized their power to strive towards their mission with a lot of discipline and elbow grease. "Summer workouts are really important and if you want to do good during the season then take them seriously, but don't forget to have fun and eat a lot.", said Tess Perfetti (12). These sole sisters put forth their sweat, blood, and tears to make it to where they are. Not only have they become a close knit team, but a true family. From the vulgar inside jokes, and the pasta loaded team meals, to the deep passion for the sport, the girls cross country team never failed to put their mind and soul into each and every waking moment of this season.

"It was special because we were all so close as a team and this season made it seem like it was a privilege to be together."

Mackenzie Nichols (12)

CROSS COUNTRY

The teams assemble at the line and the nervous waves spread through the air as they wait for the gun to pop. "In your starting positions!" the coaches announce. And they're off! Legs wind up as they fight to be the lead. But they pace, tricking the crowd who might take the win. Each time around, it's someone new. You hear the tired pants of the runners as they approach their last lap really kicking it into gear. This is their last chance, to be the champions, to beat the record. "This is it!" the crowd screams. "You got this, you can do it!" The coaches are pushing them harder than ever now. They are so close to the title. As they cross the finish line, the feeling of accomplishment overwhelms the crowd. Lowell can do anything. Jake Fontanez advised his teammates to run fast. "Give it everything you've got, you get what you put into it." Kyle Eller said, "the most memorable moment of the season was getting to state, When they announced our name everyone went crazy. We started jumping up and down and hugging each other." Overall, the Lowell Cross Country team exceeded many goals, and pushed the season to its full potential. It was successful and rewarding for both the team and the many fans who supported these runners.

At the first home meet, they all put their hands in to pump each other up for a win!

Brightly decorated, the boys pause to pose for a picture before they took their "walk to remember" in the halls of the school. This was just minutes before packing the bus for their trip to State Finals.

Matt Mathias (11) and Issac Rizzo (10), are giving all they have at the home meet against Munster to take those few extra strides to beat the fellow competitor they have ahead.

Jeff Potat (12) and Kyle Eller (12) pushed themselves to not only beat their opponents, but to continually improve their individual times.

Kyle Eller (12) poses with a close competitor from a different school, proving that off the trails, great friendships can be made out of some good ol' friendly competition!

As he runs for the finish line, Brian Blaylock (11) uses every last bit of energy he could to reach his goal time.

As the boys accomplished their goal of making it to the State Finals, true Red Devil Pride rang through the hallways of LHS. The office enthusiastically supported the boys!

Are you going to miss Cross Country, and what are you going to miss about it?

Yes I am going to miss Cross Country, the practices, the underclassmen and most of all my coach Jake Rokoczy.

What is the most memorable meet from the season?

Highland and breaking varsity time. YEAH BUDDY.

What made you decide to run Cross Country?

My freshman year I quit. After much consideration I realized I wanted to get back in and finish what I started!

Senior boys show their pride on senior night against Valparaiso on October 8th.

Anna Wildmann (11) ends her season with 102 Block Kills in the final round of sectionals.

Six seniors, 3 juniors, 2 sophomores, and 1 freshman. A new coach steps onto the court for the first season. There is only one returning varsity player. The girls need each other now more than ever. The transition process was inevitable, so once they embraced the change the girls were off to a productive season. "We are all friends outside of volleyball, and have played together for multiple years. If we weren't so close, I don't think there would still be a team" Anna Wildman (11) said. Even though the record wasn't as great as the girls hoped, they still felt accomplished as a team. "We all had each other's backs," said Hannah Tucker (12), "all we had was each other to help carry us through the season." The Indiana University Volleyball camp was especially a time for team bonding. They all learned many new things about one another, and made some new inside jokes. "My favorite memory was pulling the earbud that was stuck in Katie's ear out with tweezers" Alyssa Cory (12) said. "I am going to miss being with all of these girls everyday, they are so close to me." Said Kaitlyn Henson (12) From bus rides to long, tiring tournaments, team bonding and even some disappointing games, the girls stuck together through everything and made a bond that can never be broken.

Alyssa Cory (12) dives to the floor at the last second to get a perfect pass off of a Lake Central server. Good thing for knee pads, these ladies play to win!

The team is all packed up and ready to head off to Indiana University volleyball camp. Water bottles, workout clothes, and potato chips made the cut.

Q: Why were you out for most of the season?

A: I had a stress fracture on the top of my foot.

Q: Since the girls you played with for most of your career graduated, was the transition to a new team hard?

A: It was hard at first, but they were very accepting. I love the team now and we all get along very well.

Q: How hard was it having to just watch the game and not actually play?

A: It was much harder than everyone thinks it is. It was a big challenge to stay positive and cheer the team on. However, learning encouragement will help me in other aspects of my future life.

The girls celebrate after their huge win against the Munster Mustangs.

Standards were high for these girls as they went 5-0 early in the season. The girls knew they had to go into games with their minds set to win. "Let's keep this record going" Samantha Pagnusat (10) said after hugging her fellow teammates during a mid-season win. As their sixth game came to an end, the girls couldn't have been more happy with their victory over Munster. "This game sure did show everyone in the stands that we can work together as a whole" Jordan Gregory (10) said. The next big accomplishment was the "Dig Pink" night for breast cancer awareness month. On this night the program raised $7,500. Sara Lewandowski (9) said, "It was an amazing night to know all this money was raised for such a great reason." Winning that night against Andean was also memorable. Coach said "The team played hard and hustled throughout the whole game." As the end was near, Victoria Wynsma (10) said "My sister is a senior this year and I am definitely going to look up to how she played." Saying goodbye to the upperclassmen is always hard, but this group of junior varsity and freshman players has a big future ahead of them!

With the touch down pass completed, tradition is followed as the varsity girls perform the school song in true RDP fashion!

On October 20th the team traveled to the Junior Varsity State Competition. This mass group of teams gathered on the court for a photo opportunity.

On October 27, 2012 the Varsity returns to the bleachers waiting to see if they advanced to the final round.

Horncoming court is announced and the Jv/Fresh. girls cheer on fellow cheerleader, Hannah Jelinek' (9).

November 2nd the girls load the bus and head down to the hotel to compete in the Varsity State Finals on Saturday, November 3rd.

CHEERLEADING

Good Better Best, Never Let It Rest

The motto "until your good is better and your better is the best" motivated the girls, increasing scores and pushing them to utilize every opportunity given. To be the best, you have to compete against the best. Injuries, no longer an excuse or an obstacle, the girls pushed forward in an effort to become a better team. "What sets the girls apart from other teams is the effort they show. When I ask them for 100% I receive 110%, and it just shows how much it matters to them" said Coach Lenzo.

The Varsity team competed in five competitions this year, finishing out their season with another state rank. Following last year's lead, the girl made it to State after placing 12th at State Pre-limes. Advancing to State gave the girls one more week together. Seniors took the mat for their last time, and those new to the team experienced the thrill of stepping on the State mat for the first time. It's all about the impression. 2 minutes and 30 seconds to HIT a clean routine. Tight motions, facials, and synchronized tumbling. Leaving the mat that day, an impression was left, the girls HIT the clean routine they hoped on hitting. Many athletes dream of this chance, and these girls lived it.

They left the mat with their heads held high knowing that they had given their all. All that was left was a bus ride home, uniforms to turn in and the memory of the legacy they've started. The accomplishments made by this group of girls will never be forgotten. They have left their mark on Red Devil Cheerleading.

At the State Prelims, the varsity girls shake out their nerves while waiting on deck. High hopes to HIT a solid routine and advance to the State Finals ran through the minds of these talented young ladies.

Kicking off the season with their first game away at Crown Point High School, the varsity girls lead the crowd in the teams' favorite cheer, "Alright, Alright, Alright: LHS!" These girls always did their best rewing up the crowd in an effort to show the players their support!

While awaiting results at the State Preliminary Competition, best-friends Skyler Lewis (10) and Kara Manojlovich (12) decide to find a way to express their love for cheerleading, spending 40 minutes working on this pose. These strong girls were dedicated to their team, their friends, their families, their school, and bettering themselves.

"Devils, Devils ALL THE WAY!" At the Hammond Morton game, the varsity team leads the crowd in an effort to pump up the team and lead them to victory.

A student puts a cover silently on their Macbook, knowing now that it's different: their own, unique. Constantly students try to stand alone among the crowd and even in a sea of identical Macbook's, we try to change them; rather it's behind the screen or on the cover, they are different. Like anything else, we try to put ourselves on a different level as everyone else. Sometimes we have totally different views so on teachers. "Mrs.

Skurka is my favorite teacher just because I think she's amazing" Abigail Zerby (11) or from the classes that we love, "JROTC is my favorite class because it gives students the ability to gain leadership and learn responsibility." Hannah Gibson (12). Even though we have computers, our opinions still stand, and are as strong as ever. Every student is unique and rather they portray it through their Macbook, their preferences for teachers or electives, they show it somehow. Although we all go to the same school with the same laptops, we are strikingly different in our school life. "I try to be strongly opinionated and I'm not afraid to express my true thoughts in class." Said Brittany Judge (10). Even though she goes to our school and is alike everyone else because of that, she puts herself aside, lets herself be heard, which is how we should be academically. Rather we have laptops, books, or anything else, we try to put ourselves on a different level as everyone else.

"Every time a bell rings, an angel gets its wings." Sound familiar? If so, you're familiar with the play "It's A Wonderful Life." At any given rehearsal the actors experienced the smell of wood while walking onto the stage and transitioning into their characters. While getting into costume and talking differently, they could smell the fresh paint being added to the set by the crew who could be heard sawing off wood and drilling the wood together to make more for the set. When asked about the daily experiences in theater, Jeannine Linskens (12) said, "Walking into the auditorium the first thing you see is Ms. Martin telling the cast and crew the plans for the day." Whenever walking in the auditorium while cast and crew were practicing, you would just see people everywhere. There's many chances of meeting someone new. When walking through, you talk to people and make new friends. Then you build that relationship with them when you are building or acting with them. For Emily King (12) she really enjoyed this and I had learned this when she told me "I like the people that I would have never known otherwise." When you think of family, what do you think of? For the most part, if you've ever been in theater, the cast and crew are your family. You get in fights, you laugh, and have memorable moments that will always be remembered. For Michael DeVries (10), he expresses this very thing, "My favorite part of theater is getting to see my friends just about everyday after school. They're my second family, and they make it all worth while." Being like a second family, you need each other to survive and make the play a hit. For the cast and crew, they need each other to make the play happen with the set, the music, the acting, everyone works together. Sure things can get hectic but no matter what "Crew and cast are like ying and yang, you need one another." Emma Cook (10) No matter what, when in theater you will remember the people. This play will be remembered by all who participated and saw it. With being directed, being with you're second family, working together to make a wonderful life, and meeting incredible people, you will look back and no that is wasn't forgettable.

During intermission, Brannon Geist (10) touches up her make-up for the next scene.

The Directors work their magic.

During a pre-rehearsal warm-up, these actors made funny faces and noises.

In this scene, George, Jared Cottingham (11), learned to appreciate all that he had with is family and friends.

Embarrassing and Funny Moments:

Michael DeVine

"One time, me and Ariana Ramon were walking into the theater and it was dark. We always count the stairs so we don't hurt ourselves, but we miscounted one time, and Ariana epically stubbed her toe. I just screamed."

"Using the projector, we could see the small sized drawing of a few houses and make them larger on the set by tracing over the projections on the walls," Megan Suarez (12) said.

The crew is working hard painting a set piece.

MARCHING BAND

It's not about getting from point A to point B, it's about the memories created along the way. Though not reaching the level of competition that they had anticipated, the group worked together and proved that they were determined to grow. It is a great feeling when so many people are involved with helping a program develop. The parents worked just as hard as the students, coming in for early mornings, late nights, working on props, and uniforms. Even through the blazing hot summer days and the cold, windy night practices, every member of the program gave everything they had up to the very last second on the field. "The band has never had such a unified state of mind before; our goals were finally in alignment" Abby Layer (12) said. Saying goodbye to the 24 seniors that helped this program grow will be hard, but they have established a family that will last a lifetime.

Senior Shelby Brown is a leader on and off the field, her fellow bass clarinets will miss her.

The football team members aren't the only ones who look forward to 'Friday night lights'. Performing at halftime is something that gets the marching band ready for weekend competitions.

The seniors are having some fun while waiting to leave for their Regionals competition. Never a dull moment in band!

Dear Underclassmen,

Thank you for letting us share our last season with you; we are still very proud of all the improvements we have made together. We know you will continue to grow. Even when you feel like giving up, remember your light from within. You have provided us with memories that will last us a lifetime. The road doesn't end here, so keep marching on.

Love, your seniors

It's sad to see these 24 seniors go, all of them have contributed different personalities, viewpoints, and talents helping to develop a program unlike any other at Lowell. They have created a legacy for future marchers to look up to.

"I could not be more proud to have worked with such a dedicated section."

The group of Debutantes gather together with poise and good picture.

"People have the ability to do magical things with their voice, and what a chorus can do together is even better."

Annie Kennelly (11)

Premiere sang with true feeling the Les Miserables medley, leaving the audience with chills. This group worked really hard to ensure a stellar performance of this classic.

"Let the passion out, no one cares if you're crazy, as long as you own it."

CHOIR

Mic check, warm ups, and last minute run throughs. As the seats filled up in the auditorium, the nerves in the students got more unbearable, and the anxious parents waited with their cameras ready at hand the concert finally began. New Beginnings concert started with "Your The One That I Want" by John Farrar and ended with "Stand Together" by Jim Papoulis. Mrs. Rickaby chose New Beginnings because it is a fresh start for the freshmen coming in and another group of seniors leaving. Yet again the Adaptive Music class got another standing ovation. When asked what song would bring the most emotion Mrs. Rickaby said, "For me, the piece that creates the most emotion is the "Les Miserables" medley. I absolutely love that musical and Premiere sings it so well, they bring me to tears! For the audience, I hope they like "Stand Together" and really understand the emotion and unity we are trying to convey." Speaking for all the choir students those songs really brought some tears especially for our seniors. Lynn Galliher (12) expressed her feelings for the song "Seasons Of Love" before the performance saying, "This song is very dear to our seniors hearts so if you listen closely to the lyrics it says a lot about this next year in our lives." Leaving you with some advice, for those of you in choir or debating to join, "Take it seriously and enjoy every moment. It flies by and before you even know it, its done" Carroll Lewis (12) said.

JUNIOR MISS

Heels clicked against the hardwood floor. Dresses are being flung everywhere. Bobby pins are being dropped. Hairspray fills the whole room. The little sisters rush to get the final touches. Then it goes silent. The girls stop everything they're doing. It's time. They strut out to the stage in a perfect line as their names are being called. Flashing the biggest and prettiest smiles they could give. The Distinguished Young Ladies competition had begun. They showed off their athletic skills with an intense dance workout. Followed by their individual portion with their unique talent, giving everything they had in one shot. "My favorite category was talent." Said Rebecca Greaney (12) "I played a song from Harry Potter on my flute. I'm a really big fan, so it was great to be able to perform something from that!" But no matter what they did in this competition, it wasn't just about winning. It was about having the chance to show who they really are inside. And that's exactly what they did. They worked hard to make the show perfect. "The sleepover was my favorite although it involved NO sleep! We were up at 3 a.m doing our poise routine." said Lindsay Ward (12). So as you can tell they were very dedicated. Most of the girls showed in the parade, wearing their big fancy dresses and waving like princesses. Carley Austgen (12) said, "Yes, it was great listening to the little kids say 'Look at the princesses!'" it was scary but still fun.

Lindsay Ward (12)

Fitness was just another part of the competition. Sarah Wietbrock (12) anxiously awaited her chance to show the crowd and the judges her fitness physique and ability to tear it up on stage.

Samantha Swank (12) spent some time smiling during the large group number practice. She was just happy to be a part of the show!

"We had this overnight practice where we practiced until 2 a.m. and it was so much fun, but we were definitely tired the next morning."

WACKY DAY

It's that week before homecoming that gets everyone fired up and in the spirit: the week where you can wear your pajamas, dress like a farmer, wear the most random pieces of clothing together, rock out, or simply show the school your inner RDP. One man takes this week much more seriously than others; his name is Mr. Brandush. He takes each day to the extreme. From lightsabers to bathrobes to tie-dye, his eclectic look draws quite the crowd. "I love the opportunity to dress crazy and have fun with my wardrobe," Mr. Brandush said. When the students were asked who was the teacher best dressed on spirit week, Mr. Brandush was the obvious answer. Mr. Brandush said that the best part about dressing up was, "the strange looks, people shaking their heads at you, the laughter, and being able to show others not to take anything too seriously." Some wonder what this week would be like if Mr. Brandush was in charge. Well we would definitely see some new days like flashback day or maybe costume day. Mr. Brandush's wacky style adds that extra flavor that the whole school needs to get fired up and ready for homecoming.

HOMECOMING

Flowers, lockers, signs, volleyballs, and several other creative ways of asking your friend or boy/girlfriend to the dance helped add excitement to this homecoming season. Seems like everywhere we turned people were being asked all over the school. We had some very creative ideas throughout the process. Not only were people being asked in really cute ways, but the dance itself was especially fun this year. Seniors, Kalyne Godbolt, Natalie Zeiter, and Breana Norris, had been planning their group since summer. They wanted the whole night to be a big hit and have no regrets what so ever. Megan Litteral (12), Melissa Bennett (12), and Kaitlyn Henson (12) all agreed that knowing it was their last homecoming ever made it extra special. Going all out, having fun with our friends, and letting loose was very memorable and fitting for it was their last RDP homecoming after 4 years of fun, studies, dances, and friends. By the end of the night all the planning, time, effort, and ideas that were put into the whole dance itself finally paid off. From all the first time freshmen to the veteran seniors, they all seemed to be having a pretty memorable time and we're sure they won't forget this rockin' night.

Fashion trends flourish in the fall. Magazines show the hottest new looks, and some students are quick to test out the new apparel. One of the newest fads encouraged a female "twist" on male pieces. For example, combat boots were more popular with the girls than the boys. Sheer collared shirts also provided a modern interpretation of a classic look. Vintage trends like leather jackets helped warm us up during the cold fall mornings. Oversized shirts, prints, and retro Nikes made a comeback this season. Casual but charming, the guys were also fond of the jeans and button-up look. Fashion forward, Nathan Muha (11) expressed his fall pick for shoes. "I love my Stacy Adams Wingtips. They're my favorite for the fall."

While following the latest trends can be fun, it's important to have your own style and feel confident wearing it. "I'm all different styles and if someone doesn't like it, too bad!" Samantha Chalmers (11) said. So whether you're up to date with the latest trends, or love to rock your own look, fall is the perfect season for fashion.

During one of the boys' swim meets in the natatorium you can feel their overwhelming spirit and determination. Whether they are pacing down the deck and cheering on one of their own, or standing tall on the blocks and preparing themselves to win the event, these boys understand the true value of unity. Nolan Cook (11) shares, "this team is very close; we always encourage each other to do our best. When you're in the middle of an event, you can definitely hear your teammates screaming at you to keep going." Their loyalty to one another is undeniable, and each member of the team is determined to get that win during a meet. "We all work together, no matter if it's for a relay or during practice. We know that together we are capable of winning" Nick St. Martin (11) said. Each teammate strives for their place on the record board, but also encourages each other to do their absolute best, proving their loyalty and dedication to this sport. "When I am up on that block and getting ready to dive in, I know that the rest of my team is there to support and encourage me to do my best. That makes it so much easier" Zach Potat (12) echoed. It seems that this team's spirit is here to stay, and they will 'get that win' together.

Dedication and perseverance is the driving force behind any great team, and these girls are no different. When they were faced with small numbers and the loss of a few exceptional seniors from last year, this team decided to push even harder and work towards their goal together. Through this hard work, the team bonded immensely and became closer than ever. "I'm so glad I ended high school swimming with a great season, and I am so proud of everyone. We became closer than ever this year" said senior swimmer, Haley Stender. This team went on to Sectionals for their relay team, and proved how capable they are of a comeback. "I was so proud of our performance this year and how we made it to Sectionals for relay. We definitely tried our hardest and it really paid off" said Samantha Chaulmers (11). Between tough practices and challenging meets, these girls grew closer and closer. "I remember the bus ride home from Conference we laughed the entire time. It just never stopped! We are definitely a very tight-knit team." said Mikki Wood (10) as she reminisced about her favorite moments from this season. With their strong bonds and overwhelming devotion to the sport, this team has demonstrated that they are not giving up, no matter the circumstances.

one of the toughest teams in the area, we continued to believe in our coaches and knew we could pull through despite the odds we were faced with," stated Jordan Hansen (11). The group of boys had their ups and downs and each overcame their very own obstacles. With only the help of one senior, a strong coach and the faithful support of fans and family, these boys "shocked the world," said Hamm (11). The whole team struggled to keep the winning record up because of a game against Hammond Gavit High School that went into overtime, and a game against Griffith High School where Zack VanHook (11) scored a three pointer in the last second of the game, giving them a close win. Even though they started out as underdogs, they demonstrated their determination they each had by proving everyone wrong, because they were the ones who never gave up when everyone else did. "You guys don't believe me? I will cut that net down and eat it in front of every one of those seven thousand people!" screamed Coach Richie. Eric Zukauskas (10) said, "You have to leave it all on the court for thirty-two minutes." And that's exactly what they did.

Question & Answers with Spenser Kersey

-What was it like for you to be the only senior on the team?

Weird and Different.

-Was being the only senior on the team an advantage or disadvantage?

Advantage. I could make anybody do anything I wanted.

-Was there ever a time that you wished there were other seniors on the team?

Sometimes yes. Sometimes no.

With the ball flying out of bounds, Spenser Kersey (12), William Barker (11), Brandon Cory (9) and Zack VanHook (11) line up to start a new play.

-What was your best year in basketball and why?

My senior year because I got to play a lot. Our team was a group of great guys. We never got out of our minds and never gave up.

-What are your future plans regarding basketball? Are you going to play college basketball? If so, where?

I will play in leagues for fun, I'll play at the park and in my driveway. Nope. I'm not playing college ball.

PTBR echoed through the girls' heads during every game of the season. From the start till the end, they fought for what they wanted and that is what they got. They not only won their games but they won the crowd along with it. They took home that conference title again and made their town proud of what they've become. The seniors have all played together the past ten years. Point Guard, Kalyne Godbolt (12), said "These past four years are the most unforgettable and I wouldn't of wanted to spend them any other way.." She was one of our seniors as well as Carley Austgen, Mackenzie Kreutz, Katie Bobos, Sarah Wietbrock, and Marie Ingebretsen. These girls showed their love for the game throughout the season and they fulfilled their goals by doing what they said they'd do best...they played to be remembered.

New traditions, sharp squeaks against the wood floor, and off-key locker room singing grow accustomed to the youthful JV Girls Basketball team. Already having a solid foundation, the coaches were able to get a snappy start from the get-go. "At first, I was nervous because I never meet the head coach before the season started, however, as the season went on the head coach and I built a great relationship," Coach Hudak explained. Echoing the quote, 'Play to be Remembered' in their minds, players like Jessica Bullitt (10) used it to motivate her throughout the season. Head coach, Pete Bakas, used dynamic offenses and defenses in attempt to defeat winning teams like Lake Central and Merrillville. Katie Lewandowski (10) said "my favorite memory was when we beat the undefeated Warsaw team." The girls poured every ounce of horse power they had to finish each game. As a big game approached, the team was anxious to say the least. Their opponent was the dreaded team, Lake Central. The game was tied until an opposing player made a free throw in the last minute, resulting in a loss. The girls won something better than a game this season, they discovered pride. Not only did these players get to experience a new atmosphere of coaching, but they also learned things you wouldn't learn in a classroom. The girls left their raw sweat, tears and pride all on the court within every practice and game they faced, as a lady red devil rightfully should.

WRESTLING

Never underestimate a small team or a young competitor. This season, the Lowell Red Devil Wrestling Team had 17 varsity boys and 6 junior varsity boys and proved size and age doesn't determine your place in the competition. The team started out with several home meets which helped them grow and build bonds with one another. The first invite with Griffith gave them confidence after scoring 60-6. The boys continued their winning streak for several meets against Plymouth, Hobart, and Highland high schools. After the conference, 14 of the boys moved onto sectionals, and 11 of them made it to regionals at Crown Point. The lucky 5 boys to make it onto semi-state at Merrillville high school included Mitch Roadruck (12), Ryan Patterson (12), Jacob Gross (11), Kenny Hughes (11) and Drew Hughes (9). On Friday, February 15th, the first round of state finals began in Indianapolis. Mitch, Ryan, Kenny and Drew wrestled in several matches and fought their way to the top of the brackets. On Saturday, February 16th, Mitch Roadruck (12) was declared 7th in the state. He was overwhelmed with emotion, this being his first and last year making it this far. Drew Hughes (9) was in awe to receive the medal for 2nd in the state of Indiana. "We had a champion team this year" George Fields (11) said. Though the boys and coaches are sad to lose two great seniors, Ryan Patterson and Mitch Roadruck, they know there is a great future ahead for the team. The school is proud of them.

GYMNASTICS

In gymnastics how good you want to be depends on the effort you put into it. As the program grows and new members first learn to compete the first thing that each person must remember is that the team comes first. Supporting each other and giving assistance when need. When facing a school the girls compete to better themselves. Setting out individual goals, as well as an overall team goal. Perfection is key in gymnastics, changes are made to routines each time you compete, not to hurt feelings, only to better scores. Frustrating it may be a quote is taken from the movie The Replacements "...heart..you've got to have heart, miles and miles of heart!" In gymnastics it's not about being the best but putting in your best effort. The girls aren't expected to place first in every event but before they compete they are asked to do one thing and that is to give 110%.

Spending five to six days a week with each other, you learn a lot about the person standing next to you. Gymnastics a more or a mental sport than physical. Ability comes from attempting. Having that trigger in your head saying "I can do this," and doing it. The girls count and depend on their coaches and each other, and when falling off a beam, heart gets them back up.

After a home meet against Chesterton the team gathers around to discuss performances and await their results.

"Hide your burns!" The team laughs at the last practice before sectionals as they pose for this picture featuring team supporter Teddy Feddler (12).

CHEERLEADING

A group of people linked in a common purpose: TEAM. People who learn how to help each other see their true potential and encourage each other to push beyond their limitations: TEAM MATE. Red Devil Cheerleading isn't just a group of girls; it's a group of hard working girls, whose dedication and dependence on one another got things done. Unlike any other sport, when you have a set stunt group and one person is missing, everyone is incomplete. From broken shoulders and bulging disks, to a car accident, it's easy to say that this season had its ups and downs. No matter what, someone is there to catch you. Making changes and switching stunt group positions around, the best was made out of each situation. The girls were unable to compete as a team this season due to injuries; however, Kelsea Brady (10) and Erika Miley (10) competed in a duo competition at La Porte High School placing first. "Even though as a team we didn't compete this season, it doesn't mean this season wasn't successful. Being around such a great group of girls who are able to literally have each others' back rapped up my high school cheering career," says Kara Manojlovich (12).

BOWLING

A team can't be successful without devotion and dedication. From the coaches to the players it takes a special group of people to come together, be successful, and have fun. Coach Martha Vasquez Bozeman devotes her life to bowling and these kids. Without her dedication there wouldn't be a bowling team at Lowell. She helps make the sport fun and affordable. Letting the teams bowl for free and paying for the tournaments. She gives every team member the individual one on one time to help improve their game. Every year there are multiple students that receive bowling scholarships for college. Dylan Myers received a bowling scholarship to Marian University. "Martha has coached me along with my father Robbie Myers ever since I was first starting, and I owe all my success to them" Dylan Myers (12) said. The boys bowling team has put in an extended amount of time into practicing and competing. This year the team became conference champs for the first time in school history and sectional runner-ups. This sport keeps growing and so does this high-school team. The Lowell bowling boys had an amazing season this year.

"I got a chicken. I mean I got a turkey!"

The boy's team posed with coach Martha Vasquez Bozeman at the last game of the season. Although they were sad to say goodbye to the seniors, they were pleased with how the season went. The seniors were grateful for the experiences and memories that were created.

COUNCIL student

Unless you're an active part of Student Council, you're probably unaware of the work that goes into being a participant. Student Council is a small group of students that get together planning dances and multiple activities for the school and other students. The Council practices using democracy when it comes to decision making. According to Morgan O'Hanlon (12) "We talk amongst the groups and weigh each others opinions with our own and finally come to an agreement." "We mostly have team work, and they all work together" Katy McClintic (11) said. "We vote based on who puts forth time and effort" Mallory Leckrone (11) said. "We voice our opinion and see what everyone else thinks. We also use team work." Rachel Megquier (11) said "I always propose my ideas and ask everyone if they have anything to add or their opinions." Jesse Barrientes (11) stated "I make suggestions, then we vote on what we all agree upon." "It's team work, we all put idea's together pick out the best" Nina Vasquez (10) stated "We usually have a group discussion and take a vote on what we want to do!" "Team work" Cody Imes (10) stated. "It makes you feel good when you're part of a team that comes to an agreement" Brittany Finigan (10) echoed. "We like to gather everybody's ideas, hear what they have to say, and make a vote at the end." Miranda Olson (10) finished by agreeing with most of the other members: "We give our opinions, then we all decide on the best option." Clearly, being a member of Student Council means getting your voice heard and allowing others to agree or disagree with your ideas and thoughts. Whether it's picking a theme for a dance or sending a message to the student body as a whole, it's important to run a democracy when it comes to school wide, student driven activities.

Getting to Know The Sponsors

Why is Student Council important to you?

Freshmen
Van Hoose

It's important because they make a difference in the community, like the rock the belt contest and speaking to the juniors safety and the Angel Tree presents.

Sophomore
Vicari

It's important because it's a good opportunity for students to get involved in their school and with their classmates. It also gives students a chance to have their voices and ideas heard.

Junior
Gramenz

It's important to me because it helps kids who want to participate in school functions and do things they're not usually able to do, like plan dances or hold fundraisers to help people in need.

Senior
Mikulich

It's important because Student Council helps put on school wide functions. It's a great thing to be involved in because instead of the school making all of the decisions, the students choose what they would like to see happen.

Main
Witkowski

It's important because it's something I enjoy because I get to interact with students that I wouldn't normally have in class and help the school by organizing activities.

Senior student council member Cambria Wynsma and Ms. Gramenz leader of junior student council smile for a picture on the last day to show how much fun they have had with each other throughout the years.

ACADEMICS

Winter

Winter time, middle of the year, and everybody is finally getting used to everything when new things come into play. During your school year, you might wonder how things can change, whether it's at the semester time and changing classes or who is new to the building. As we learn, the school is full of change, but it all comes down to reflecting on the first semester? As Callie Flowers (10) said, "The most important thing I learned in Mrs. Peluso's room was that grammar matters. For instance, her poster reads, 'Let's eat, Grandma. NOT, 'Let's eat Grandma.'" While some learn from quotes on posters or other methods, what matters is what you remember when you reflect on the semester. Every semester brings change and sometimes change can be scary.

Another important part of the semester we learn about is expressing ourselves. "I like to sing, so when I go to choir I feel like I can be myself, so it's the class I enjoy the most" Mikaela Goldsmith (11) said. As winter kicks in, students are able to feel more relaxed and have more connection with the teachers and other students and feel like they belong. "By time winter sets in, I finally feel like I understand what's going on and have learned something in all of my classes" said Kassidy Lee (10). Whether you take a year long course or two semester classes, the winter brings ups and downs in the classroom, but being closer to the end of the year seems to make everyone happy. The time period between winter and spring break seems long, but winter has it's perks.

On December 6th, Carly Cales (11) is getting prepared to donate a pint of blood for The American Red Cross in front of the theater. Many students participate in one or both of the biannual blood drives.

The mentors learn to play an ice breaker game to introduce to their mentees. The string game is a "getting to know you" game and allows you to learn more about someone by tossing string.

Ashley Hudgens (11), Amy Wallis (10) and Dana Biederman (10) prepare for group discussions and learn about what it is to be a mentor over the summer trip at De Paul University.

On the last day of their summer trip at De Paul University, this group of mentors gather around for a group picture. By learning the knowledge on how to mentor, communication skills, how to be a leader the group will return to Lowell High School and be introduced to their groups!

Becoming a leader, assisting another in specific skills, knowledge, and enhancing growth is the central idea of Lowell High School's Mentoring program. Sophomores, Juniors, and Seniors in the program help the freshmen adjust to high school, allowing them to feel like they have someone to come to if they ever need personal or academic assistance. Having mentoring groups every week, the upper classmen guide their mentorees in discussions about what goes on in and out of school, such as bullying, social media, study habits, future jobs, and problems. The kids interact by talking to each other and learning. "Being a part of the mentoring program is rewarding; you feel like you've helped someone adjust and feel like they belong in high school. By giving the freshmen guidance I feel as if their transition into high school was made easier," says Megan Litteral (12).

Being a mentor is more than just helping someone adjust to high school. It's about making someone feel welcomed. Mentors help mentorees learn to grow as a person and how to apply some of these life lessons and skills, not only in high school, but throughout life. "Getting along with different people and transitioning into high school helped me mature. Having a mentor gives me someone to talk to and ask about advice. We discussed a lot about life and things teens shouldn't be doing like drugs and other adult only activities," Grant Siedentopf (9) said.

Mentoring the freshmen and helping them adjust to the high school isn't all the work that is done by the mentors. The mentors also do a lot of work with Mrs. Bilski class, helping these students one on one with their communication skills and computer skills. Working side by side with these students, they have an easier time walking the halls and feeling like they belong.

SPECIAL

education

Let's step foot in Mrs. Bilski's classroom. This is where these students are constantly working on basic, everyday life skills. It doesn't seem like much, but it really is. They learn how to work with money in real life situations, using checkbooks too. The students are involved in an intense program which means the students mainly learn all of their skills in a self contained moderate classroom. But the learning doesn't just stop inside the classroom. "Study trips are very functional and are considered community based instruction such as trips to grocery store, restaurants, and shopping," said Mrs. Bilski. Working together and working hard is something everyone does in this classroom everyday. Even if they're working on something tough, the smiles are still spread across their faces. An outlook in the classroom is when the students get to work with all the peer mentors. They get a positive interaction with the peer mentors and an uplifting learning experience. They help these students do arts and crafts, etc. Mrs. Bilski said, "They help my students with our life skills curriculum, functional academics, technology, crafts, field house, parties, and games like Bunco. The peer mentors are everything to my students." It doesn't matter who you are, when you walk inside the classroom you are greeted with shy smiles and outgoing hellos. With open arms, you're welcome inside. Whether your a peer mentor coming inside the classroom to help out, or just wanting to make friends this is the place for you. With each of them being so friendly, you can really feel the welcome. Facing with all the difficulties they have to face everyday, they come together and pull through. They show the real meaning of strength and happiness.

"It feels good to know that you're helping someone who appreciates it."

Samantha Roach (10) helps Alex Quiarte (11) paint. Clearly happy and enjoying himself, Alex benefits from Samantha's help and Samantha benefits from the smile she leaves on his face!

Taking a break for a quick snap shot, Bobby Calabrese (10), Ton Wynsma (10), Haily Bushore (10) and Katie Lewandowski (10) smile for a picture. Painting is just one of the many crafts that take place in Mrs. Bilski's room, along with music, math, English, and everyday skills.

Questions & Answers with

Mrs. Bilski

Q. What is your favorite thing to do with your students?

A. Teaching because it has changed how I teach and my students love it.

Q. What was the most memorable trip this year?

A. One of our favorite trips was our lunchtime picnic at Mt. Rushmore.

Q. What do you do with your kids at home?

A. They love playing on their laptops, listening to music, and playing "tag."

BAND Winter

"During the winter band is more laid back, nothing too close, pep band gets to jam out and have fun, and we have more responsibility with solo and ensemble coming" Kaitlyn Lichtle (12) explains. The spaghetti dinner was delicious and if you were one of the many people to attend, then you were lucky to enjoy a wonderful meal and listen to such great talent play. "Solo and ensemble is fun because it's when students are more driven to be creative" Abby Layer (12) said. Many soloist played their piece at the spaghetti dinner and was later played to better prepare for the big moment during solo and ensemble. During solo and ensemble there were a lot of people, mainly students, with instruments. Matt Waldren (12) said, "everywhere you go, you all have something in common." With a room full of talent and nervous soloist and students getting prepared for ensemble, they all performed excellently. Many got gold, silver, and bronze.

Playing loud and proud, the two guitar players have the whole band smiling with excitement.

A few pep band members gather together on their last night together to smile and say cheese.

It's the most wonderful time of the year and our choir students love to spread their Christmas cheer all over town. At seven o'clock, in our auditorium, on December 15th the winter choir concert began.

Debutantes started off the night with A la naNita from the movie Cheetah Girls and then moved to Vocal Flare show choir. They gave every bit of energy during their performance which included Best Of Glee Medley from the show Glee. "I am going to focus on getting my part down and blending with everyone around me, while portraying the emotion in all of our songs" Lynn Galliher (12) explained. As the concert ended, the audience applauded as all of the choirs joined to sing Believe by Josh Groban. When asked to sum up choir in three words Jeannine Linskens (12) replied "fun, friends, and spontaneous because I walk into choir and know I'm going to enjoy what we do." Two of our seniors graduated midterm and Morgan Farrell (12) said "I'm going to miss being around a group of people that have the same passion that I do."

DODGEBALL

As Saturday, March 16th approached teams were squeezing there way in left and right to play in this years 9th annual dodgeball tournament. Mr. Bobby Wong began moving and arranging teams for the bracket to be made. It was a tough thing to handle considering there were 40 teams, the largest number of teams that have ever played. "Dodgeball couldn't come any faster!" said Jack DeValk (9) As dodgeball came and gone it was the most successful dodgeball night in history raising over $5,000 overall. In addition to that amount, St. Baldricks raised over $11,000 and had 82 boys and 2 brave girls shave their head for the amazing cause of child cancer. Mr. Gianotti and Mr. Wong did a fantastic job organizing this year's tournament!

JROTC

Leadership, honor, a sense of commitment and willingness to help others are all positive traits necessary in participating in Junior Reserve Officer Training Corps Program. Many students take this class every year, but not many people know just how serious it is to be involved in this organization. Hannah Gibson (12) said, "I like JROTC because it helps you understand and gain leadership and responsibility."

Even though it is a class, there is also an extracurricular component. Sometimes it requires helping their community and representing their country, such as representing our flag's colors at football games or the Labor Day parade. They also host a food drive to help those in need, and even though it's not part of the grade, the students devoted to the idea of the group.

Being involved in JROTC requires a certain level of maturity. "It's helped me become a better person through example and lead" Devin Chasko (11) said. Through teamwork and close friends, this group of students grew close, and even though they can be serious, they joke around quite a bit. Through leadership they learn to laugh and even on a field trip they can joke around. "Can we leave Kaylee at the museum?" Mikayla Marcinek.

Even in the winter, there are always new styles to add to your wardrobe. You don't have to sacrifice fashion sense for the cold weather, and many students proved that with their ability to pull off the latest trends. A popular look this season was printed leggings and pants. The prints often consisted of tribal, animal and floral patterns. Girls liked to pair these with big sweaters, a jacket or a scarf that complimented a color in the print. Though dark colors are often associated with winter, pastels seemed to make their way into the cold weather wear. A popular item was the mint jean, often worn with a light colored sweater and boots. Some guys were spotted pulling off the pastel look with a light colored polo or sweater vest. Another trend this season were the eye-catching metallics. Girls incorporated metallics into their outfits with shiny shirts and accessories. A must-have for the winter was the famous glitter backpack from Victoria's Secret. It was sported by many girls throughout the halls and came in all different colors. Girls also incorporated metallics into their wardrobe with sequin and sparkle shirts. Animal prints were popular, too. Girls wore leopard print leggings, snakeskin tops, zebra scarves, and cheetah boots. They claimed that their favorite accessory was the chunky scarf. It could be paired with anything; plain t-shirts, a simple sweater, or even a leather jacket were perfect. The guys agreed that moccasins were the best shoe for the winter. They came in several colors, but the most popular was the classic tan. So overall, the winter season is no reason to compromise your fashion sense. When it comes to your personal style, cold weather means you'll just need a little bit of frosty fashion!

Winter

Visions of relaxation and vacations dance in the minds of students as they anxiously anticipate the ringing of the 3 pm bell. It feels as if it takes ages, but when it finally rings, we feel free at last. "The thing I looked forward to the most was going skiing in my backyard; bummer that it wasn't covered with snow," said Anna Wildman (11) who was obviously disappointed with the lack of snowfall. Since this was one of the most snowless breaks that we have had, students seemed to relish in the relaxed atmosphere. "Mine consisted of friends, lavish amounts of hot chocolate, and catching up with family," Katie Lewandowski(10) echoed. But some enjoyed the absence of the snow, "I was happy because I didn't have to wash my car" said Hannah Million (12). Even though we didn't get the white Christmas that most people looked forward to, the students made the best of the break and enjoyed their time away from their demanding classes.

On the last day before winter break, the guidance helpers get together to show their Christmas spirit by participating in Ugly Sweater Day.

TRACK boys

This year's track season was full of energy and diversity. With many ups and downs, the beginning of the season was a challenge. Losing some of the team's best runners to injury meant bringing up underclassmen to the starting line. Making light out of the given circumstances, all the boys pushed through, giving it their all. Switching people around and having them run what they weren't used to running in last minute changes, the team always put their best effort forth. Everyone ran their best and stepped up when it was needed. With all the jokes, laughs and memories shared, the most was made out of this season. The boys season came to an end, with two boys making it to state. Kyle Eller in the 3200 meter run, and Brendon Shanks in the 300 meter hurdles. Having two boys making it to state was a cause for celebration!

True athletes aren't born to compete, they live to compete. Being a part of such a successful team not only leaves you with memories but with a sense of accomplishment, and your high school years are where you find out the athlete you can be. All the young ladies on the Red Devil Girls Track team this year have something to be proud of.

Some athletes were lost to injuries or busy schedules, but those new to the program and those returning, all know the effort that was put in to the training spent to prepare for each meet. "A lot of the newer members really stepped up and made a name for themselves and that's important to having such a prosperous team," states Coach Coil. Records were broken, including school records as well as personal records. Two of the most outstanding records that were broken this year were Tori Nida's (12) hurdle record that she continued to beat throughout the meets and was the time advancing her to state. Another was Nicole Kiszenia (11) ending her shot season with a 38'4" throw.

As a team of four seniors, four juniors, four sophomores, and one freshmen they were determined to work harder everyday during practice in order to achieve their goal of becoming a stronger team mentally and physically. The boys built their strength and became a better team as the season progressed. Their hard work payed off when mid season they won a tough game against Valpo and went on to have a five game winning streak. "Beating Valpo lead us to an awesome win over Hanover Central!" Jake Fontanez (12) said. As the season had its up and downs by the team working together more and becoming confident in themselves, it really showed they could work towards becoming a better team. "We had some quality wins this year and the team has competed day in and day out. I am very proud of each one of my players" Coach Wong proclaimed. By the end of the season having a more confident and stronger team made the boys agree that this season they worked harder than ever to achieve goals that they haven't in previous seasons and that it was one unforgettable season with many memories.

Coach Wong and assistant Jamie Kinn bring the team together after being on the field to express how they felt about that last play and tell the boys to get the bats rolling this inning.

I appreciate all of you and everything you've done. I'll miss you all. Good luck in your future plans!

Thanks for a great season! I wouldn't have wanted anyone else to be my teammates but you guys.

Coaches, thanks for everything through out high school and for inspiring me to play in college, and underclassmen don't forget to always make it nasty!

Decked out in pin stripes and eye black, ready to play, the boys JV baseball team went head to head with their biggest opponent this spring. Rain. The boys had more cancellations than ever, but that didn't water down their mojo. "We learn more from our losses than our wins" Parker Suckow (9) said. The boys held many wins and many losses but the mindset of each player was to keep their head above water when it came to a sour game. Not only did the team focus on learning new techniques, but they also emphasized team chemistry. "Our team bonds over wings and ranch" Taylor Zea (9) said. "A good team will have good chemistry, and as a coach I see exactly that both on and off the field" Coach Thompson said. This year brought youth and gratitude to the Lowell boys JV baseball program. Very rarely is a team filled with students who are proud without being cocky, but this team was comprised of focused, humble, and positive young men.

There was one out when Morgan O'Hanlon (12) gets on base with a nice slap right through the five-six hole. Next up, Lexi Marshall (12), with a sacrifice bunt to move O'Hanlon to second base. Then, Alyssa Pokropinski (11) comes up and smokes the ball for a double, scoring O'Hanlon. With two outs, senior Courtney Walter comes up to bat. The winning run is on second and everyone is depending on Walter to hit Pokropinski in. The whole team is on the fence cheering their lungs out "we believe in you, Courtney!" Tennis can be a bit challenging, but our 2012-2013 teams made it through the bad and the good times. They mentally formed a bond with one another. Catching up with the real DEAL

1. Do you learn more from wins or losses? And why?

When we go into a game we don't focus on winning or losing; I mean good tennis is good tennis. There are certain opponents we go against and we know that we are a little bit out matched, but you can still have a really good productive match against those players.

2. What was your most memorable tennis moment this past year?

We had (for the first time ever) both the one doubles position and the one singles position advance out of the sectional. That was Kristina Stefoski (11) that won singles and Sarah Edwards and Meredith Sharkey (9) that won doubles. Yea, it was pretty memorable.

3. Do you have any last minute advice as players are entering the court?

I always try to tell my players that if they're going to lose points, why not make your opponent earn them.

GOLF boys

"FORE!!!!" Something heard during the boys golf practices held at Palmira golf course in St. John. "These boys are some of the most dedicated people when it comes to golf. Through all of the wet and freezing matches and practices, they managed to stick together and give it their all!" Coach John Harris said when asked to describe the golf team. For such a slow and quiet game, these boys really knew how to make it worth the watch; not only are they good at what they do, but they are all so different from each other. Being on any sports team you have a lot of quotes or memorable sayings. When asked about his passion for golf, Jacob Wyrick (11) said "I've spent most of my life golfing – the rest I've just wasted. Nick Gesiakowski (12) said "Golf is good, I get some fresh air and exercise, take my mind off work and see some different set ups of the place I'm visiting." Golf is the type of sport where the team is smaller but they have a huge impact on one another! The boys ended their season with more wins than losses of the 16 meets they had. Overall they had a good and fun season!

After a challenging meet on April 30th at the Summer-tree Golf Course in Merrillville, these fellas found a few minutes to kick back and have some fun before loading up on the bus.

Training

To the tops of your head or to the tips of your toes, athletic training is there for repair. From major shin splints and sprains to not-so-bad headaches and cuts, someone is always there to help out whatever problem is occurring. At every game, meet, practice, match and tournament, these dedicated, hard-working students are at your needs. "Being there to help the athletes if they need something is what I think Athletic Training is. The greatest reward is knowing that the athletes know you are there and they are glad you are. The best thing is that they make you feel part of the team," stated Nina Vasquez (10). Athletic training isn't all about working, they have fun too. Every open free time they get, they play little games related to training. One game they did in March was called "March Madness Ankle Taping Contest." In this contest, each athletic trainer races to finish taping someones ankle the fastest and the most effective. The slowest person is eliminated and the rest move on for another round. It keeps repeating until the last two people race to win. "We race to do training things like taping, and first aid to stimulate emergency situations," Ashley Doran (11) said. The top three trainers win prizes such as McDonald's gift card, iTunes card, and an Easter Basket full of candy. While having fun, they also get a better learning experience too.

Not all teenagers are star athletes or fantastic musicians. Bullying is arguably one of the biggest problems in high school, and many people feel that if teenagers were offered a place to feel welcome, bullying might not be as big of an issue as it is today. On the other hand, even star athletes and fantastic musicians should still be offered the opportunity to explore different ways of life during their education. Because of this need, RDP means more than football; It means the opportunity to be proud of who you are and what you're doing for our school and our community. FFA member, Nick Kotyuk (10) said, "FFA is fun, but it's also very helpful to our school and the town." A new club this year was the Fencing Club. Mrs. McPheeters-Neal and Mrs. Skurka joined teams to create this unique opportunity for our students. Most schools don't have a fencers' club. They were proud to have an area competition that brought in outside clubs and schools. "We were happy to host a successful event that gave our group an opportunity to show their family and friends what they've been working on for so long," Skurka stated. According to academic team coach Joseph Gianotti, "this team was the most successful, perhaps ever." LHS's 2012-2013 Decathlon team became the first Northwest Indiana team to earn a trip to Nationals. The team placed 37th in the nation. Some highlights this season included Baylee Bunce (11) winning the state title, winning 4 subject areas (essay, interview, art, and history) at State, the Science team qualifying for State, Mikayla Blievernicht (12) placing 3rd in her division at State for Decathlon, Emily King (12) placing 3rd in her division at State for Decathlon, and the Social Studies team winning the Merrillville Regional. Coach Gianotti said, "spending a lot of time reading and the willingness of teachers are some of the keys necessary to succeed." The program continues to improve and the future is really bright. Many of the current team members will return for another year of competition. Coach Gianotti said, "I think our 2013-2014 team has a good chance of making it to Nationals, which take place in Honolulu, Hawaii."

Teachers and students accumulate the same amount of knowledge that continues to blossom. Students in the music appreciation class had the opportunity to see The Blue Man Group, May 16th. spring

With the spring season comes new fresh new trends, and students of Lowell High School were eager to test them out. The girls were fond of floral patterns, which were spotted in both light and bold colors. They liked to wear the patterns as leggings, skirts and dresses. The adventurous girls paired their dresses with sneaker wedges, the new shoe sensation. Sneaker wedges were a clever way to gain a few sparkly inches, while still having that sporty look. In contrast to the norm of spring pastels, many students were seen wearing bright colors. A favorite for the spring was orange. Lace and denim were popular pieces in the closets of Lowell students as well. Girls were seen decked out in lace blouses, sundresses and tanktops. For both girls and guys, denim was a spring craze. The jean vest made a huge comeback along side the classic denim jacket. Lace and denim were sold in bold colors in order to keep up with the trend.

Lowell students know when it's time to step out of the winter slump and move into the fashion forward season of spring. It's always important to keep up with the fashion crazes, because you never know what you're missing.

The Fashion 5 With Gianotti

Joe Gianotti (English) wears a complete Brooks Brothers ensemble from baby blue socks, to a standout tie. He quotes, "Of course my mother bought these for me." Free stuff? We'll take it.

- 1) Dress for the occasion.
- 2) Don't roll up your sleeves unless you're serving food.
- 3) Ditch the hipster plaid, try gingham.
- 4) Tuck in your shirt
- 5) Leave the square-toed shoes at DSW.

"Fashion isn't always what's in or out, it's about wearing what you love."

Rilee Witt (11)

Grease Spring

"Grease is the word is the word that you heard, we've got groove we've got meaning." Down the hallways you can see the cast of Grease filled with excitement wearing their poodle skirts and leather jackets. "You can really see the actors become one with their parts"

Lynn Galliher (12) said after looking at one of the pictures from one of the performances. Opening night, March 21st, at 7 pm, we found ourselves at the reunion of the graduating class of 1959.

Eugene gave a speech of fond memories and immediately the characters and audience were transformed into a time of fun, music, and greasers of the 1950's. Throughout the show we see the growth of Sandy Dumbrowski and her "Magic Changes" from shy and pure ways. "That's the whole moral of grease is to change yourself for a boy who treats you like dirt" Mrs. Peluso sarcastically said. At the end of the show you see Sandy and Danny finally get together after Sandy's big change. Ending the show all the actors begin to walk off stage singing "We Go Together." In all choir room in the Spring you might find members rehearsing for their own piece. Katie Karstensen (11) has her own warm up: "Bubble gum, Bottle pop, and you-be-late-doo." Many of the choir and band students agree that music is in their blood. According to Emily Lach (10), "I love music, I dream about it, think about it, I just can't live without it. I hope I get a career in music sometime in the future." Spring isn't necessarily the most eventful time for choir and band, but these students still give it their all!

Most of you might think that Choir is just a place to sing and learn about music. To Jesse Rincon (11) music is therapeutic. "The different parts and beats come together and sound so good." So obviously music is more than just singing and prancing around a stage. "It's my savior. It's fun to listen to and it helps me escape and get through tough times," Ryana Nord (11) said. The highest choir at Lowell High School stand with confidence, poise, and pride during a number directed by choir director Teri Rickaby. This group was the best of the best in choir.

"Every time I leave choir, I go to my next class with songs stuck in my head. It's kinda annoying, but most of the time I like the songs."

Taylor Aeschliman (9)

These boys (who were also involved in the Spring Musical and Lowell's Got Talent) display their more serious side while softly hitting the high notes during the Spring Concert. Kolbe Albin (10) is usually a rocker at heart, but choir requires a certain amount of sophistication.

A group of horn players boom out a tune during the Spring Concert. Members of the band never have an "off" season. Most bands (all but one class section) march in the Fall and compete in the Winter and Spring. This type of devotion encourages cultivating life-long friendships.

BREAK spring

When it comes to Spring Break, there are several ways to have a good time. Some people go to the beach, some people go on mission trips, some people go on vacation, and some people stick around and enjoy the time off. Like usual, students were anxiously awaiting the 3PM bell on Thursday, March 28th to begin their 10 day Spring Break. "Panama City Beach, here I come" Jessi Merkel (11) shouted in the halls. Thirty-six students here at Lowell High School got to experience their very first get away to our nation's capitol, Washington D.C. Some kids got to travel by bus to Georgia for a band trip, and some boarded an airplane and hit the beaches for the week. Regardless of where one spends Spring Break, it's always anticipated, appreciated, and goes by much too quickly.

Striking a pose Ashley Nowak (12) stands in front of the capitol building for the start of their tours for the day.

Thoughts About Washington D.C

I loved the cherry blossom trees!

Makenna Smith (10)

The trip was so much fun! I learned nearly everything I possibly could in one week. It was the best way to learn while also seeing historic sites along the way with your friends. I'll never forget spring break 2013!

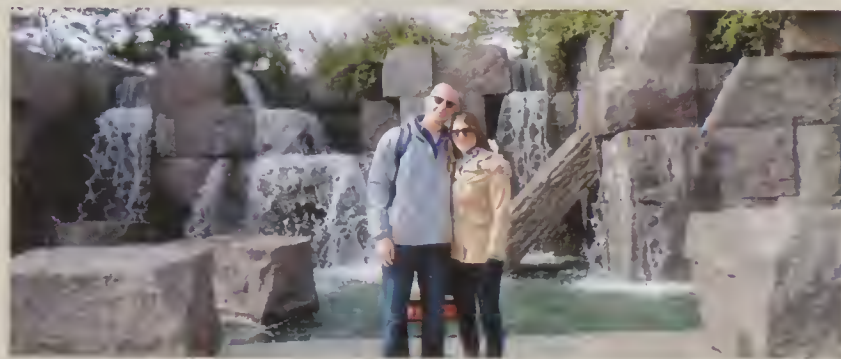

Sam Swank (12)

I honestly didn't appreciate history as much until I went on this trip. It was a great experience that I feel everyone should do at least once in their lives.

Haley Howard (12)

Overall the experience was great!

TALENT lowell's got

The lights are bright and hot, they shine a yellow glow on the contestants of Lowell's Got Talent. Solos, duets and bands piled backstage, waiting for their moment in the limelight. MCs Jack White (11) and Lynn Galliher (12) lit up the crowd with their sarcasm and humor. The audience waited in excitement for the red curtain to open.

In was Battle of The Bands this year with Sudden Suspension, Forgetting Last Monday, and False Visions. Fans raved for the familiar members singing their favorite songs. Several duets sang popular songs like "Little Talks", "With Ears To See and Eyes To Hear" and "Girl Put Your Records On." For extra fun, students Chase Gehrlich (11) and Cambria Wynsma (12) participated in duets with teachers Mrs. Mikulich (Spanish) and Mr. Brandush (English). Contests waited anxiously for fan and judges' votes.

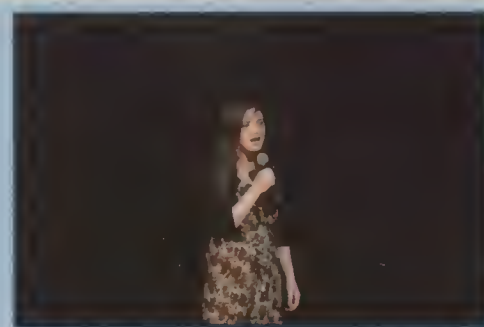

Winners for Lowell's Got Talent included Emma Cook (9) for Solo, Gabrielle Oden (12) and guest for Duet, False Visions for Band, and The 4 Drummers for Random Acts.

Fabulous and dramatic, Emma Cook (10) blows the audience away with her rendition of "Don't Rain On My Parade." She was amazing good and truly wowed the crowd.

Austen Backe (12) and fellow band members of Sudden Suspension perform fan favorites for the students of Lowell High School. Austen participated several years in a row.

Javier Guana (9) makes a memorable exit after his band Forgetting Last Monday's rocking performance.

Friends, Annie Kennelly (11) and Brannon Geist (10), let their hair down in a duet to "Girl Put Your Records On".

The guard girls and Costen King (9) perform their spring performance to a medley of songs including "Call Me Maybe", "Payphone" and "Telephone." Their innocent and fun act helped balance all of the screaming.

Theatre friends, Jacob Lang (11) and Tori Crum (12), sing a duet to a crowd favorite, "Little Talks" by of Monsters and Men. At one point they ran into the audience to get the crowd involved. The judges smiled in appreciation of the crowd-pleasing moment.

Kolbe Albin (10), Brandon King (9), Joey King (12) and Joshua Haddon (9) of False Visions rock out to their second song.

PROM

so icy

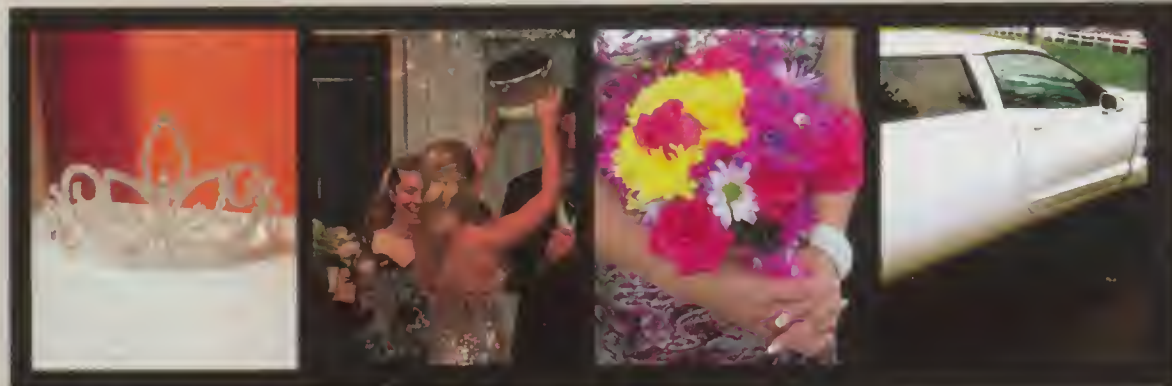

"Ice ice baby." The theme of our prom this year was "So icy" full of glitz and glam. While driving down the streets of Lowell you start to see girls taking pictures in their beautiful floor length dresses and the boys in their pin-striped tuxes. Grand March started at 4:00 in the schools auditorium where the students gather to take pictures and be announced in front of family and friends. The students are filled with anxiousness and excitement as they start pulling up to the Patrician Center. Most agreed that all expectations were met this year. "Mrs. Gramenz did a fantastic job with prom this year. She really went all out when trying to make this prom a success" Sarah Opat (11) said. This was definitely a night that won't be forgotten, and the seniors will forever hold this in their RDP memories. "It was a blast" echoed Mitch Roadruck (12).

Mrs. Gramenz gathered up a group dressed in their finest 'Merica gear to take a picture to show off their school spirit for prom spirit week.

Garrett Coming (12) walks across the stage after receiving his diploma. He will attend Purdue University to study agriculture.

GRADUATION

As the graduates of 2013 file in to the theater at 9:00 a.m. for morning rehearsal, many different thoughts are spread throughout the room. Some just wish it was time for commencement to start, because they are ready to be absolutely done with high school. However, some are wondering where the time went. Despite the difference in thoughts, this group of students seemed to develop a bond that was not completely there before. As they go through rehearsal, conversations take place about everything and anything. In one way or another everyone was anxious for the evening to come. Upstairs in the holding area in their cap and gowns, 274 seniors wait for the moment they have been looking forward to ever since their freshman year. The ceremony starts and the salutatorians, Rebecca Greaney (12) and Danielle Sopovski (12) and valedictorians Spenser Kersey (12) and Brianne Manley (12) give their speeches. They talk about the changes that have taken place while in high school, wishes for the future, and how everyone should keep in contact after graduation. The one thing that was evident in all four of the graduates' speeches was how close they feel their class has become. "Even if I was not best friends with everyone in my class, I still feel like I know everyone and I could hold a conversation with them if I were to see them next year" Kaley Lewis (12) said. Despite differences some students may have had with each other, on graduation night it was all water under the bridge. After all, they started the journey together, and they finished it together as one class.

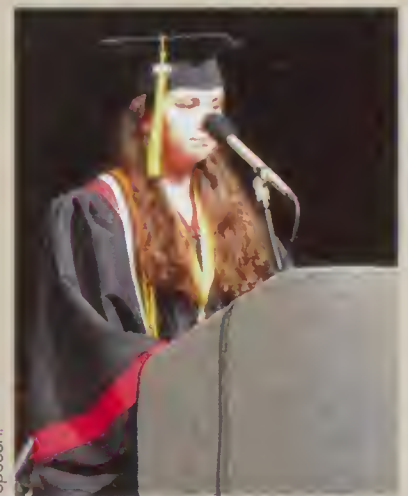

Cambria Wynsma (12) stops to shake Dr. Kleefisch's hand while walking across the stage to get her diploma.

Spenser Kersey (12) one of the valedictorians, gives his final words of encouragement to his classmates.

Salutatorian Rebecca Greaney (12) stands to give her speech.

SAYING GOODBYE to our seniors

Every year the yearbook offers parents and family members the chance to leave a celebratory message for their graduating seniors. Here you'll see our Baby Red Devils well before their first day of Freshman year.
